SURVIVORS HOLD MEMORIAL

DISTRICT CIVIL WAR VETERANS ATTEND CHURCH.

Sermon on "Patriotism" by Rev. Dr. R. L. Wright—Roll Call of Dead Comrades.

Fifty survivors of the District of Columbia Volunteers who defended the Union in the civil war gathered at the McKendree M. E. Church, Massachusetts avenue 9th street, last night, for their annual church service from earth, these comrades had not passed from this life.

As the organ pealed forth "Onward, Christian Soldiers," the gray haired veterans slowly took their places in the front part of the church. Preliminary devotional services followed.

W. H. Braund, president of the Survivors' Association of the District of Columbia Volunteers, made an address, explaining that the service was largely a memorial to the comrades who have answered the last roll call.

J. D. Ford next read the names of members of the association mustered out of the ranks in the past year.

Sermon on Patriotism.

Rev. Dr. R. L. Wright, pastor of the church, delivered an address to the veterans on "Patriotism." He welcomed the defenders of the Union, and pointed out that their presence showed, while their comrades had passed from earth, these comrades had not passed from their hearts.

"Dull and insensible in the extreme," he declared, "is the heart that does not thrill with true patriotism as we contemplate our national greatness and God's providential leadership over this life. We believe our American people and but little exhortation along this line."

"It seems to be innate in the heart of every son of American soil. I know of no country that excels ours in true devotion to national institutions. There seems to be something in the vast extent of our territory, in the pure freedom of her atmosphere that each breath with the breath of patriotism."

"Perhaps we are safe in saying that outside of the United States, patriotism is the strongest impulse that ever takes possession of the human heart. Patriotism and the love of country are closely related to religion. The man who truly loves his country will have some just appreciation of God as the Supreme Ruler and head of the nation."

Patriotism vs. Politics.

"A man is not a patriot simply because he gets drunk on election day, and hurrahs for his candidate," he declared. He no doubt feels patriotic, but feelings are sometimes deceptive.
"Some men are filled with the excitement of a political parade or campaign, and they march and hurrah to the swell of martial music and think their souls are consumed with patriotism. The probability is they have mistaken politics for patriotism, and think their souls are consumed with patriotism. True patriotism forgets self, forgets party, forgets honor, forgets spoils. It lays all these a sacrifice upon the altar of the country."

"That kind of politics which is simply a scramble for office and spoils, which teaches the selfishness and the wading neck deep in the mire of political dishonesty, is not patriotism, although the populace shouts itself hoarse over the victory."

"The patriotism held by you men here tonight was a patriotism that pressed you to the point of self-sacrifice and self-sacrifice was able to confront with faces unpaired the belching fire of artillery and the blaze of musketry. That was religious patriotism, the patriotism of heroes who conquered the combined forces of Great Britain. The tramp of steady columns, as from time to time our armies have come forth to battle, has been but the heavy footfalls of Jehovah marching on to the fulfillment of His eternal purposes with us among the nations."
